

RULES TO BE OBSERVED DURING MUSEUM VISITS

The rules to be observed in museums are designed to help protect museum collections and to ensure that visitors enjoy a pleasant and respectful experience. These rules generally include the following:

- Visitors should wear clean and appropriate clothing when visiting museums. This helps preserve the museum environment and demonstrates respect for other visitors.
- Speaking loudly should be avoided in museums, as excessive noise may disturb other visitors and damage the exhibits.
- Visitors must not touch or handle the exhibits. Artifacts are sensitive and valuable and may be damaged by contact or movement.
- Photography and video recording require permission in museums. In some museums, photography and videography are prohibited in order to protect the exhibits or due to copyright restrictions.
- Smoking is strictly prohibited in museums. Cigarette smoke may damage exhibits and disturb other visitors.
- Eating and drinking are not permitted in museums, as food and beverages may harm the exhibits and inconvenience other visitors.
- Pets are not allowed inside museums. Even domestic animals may damage exhibits or disturb other visitors.
- Visitors must comply with the instructions of security personnel, who are responsible for the protection of the museum and the safety of visitors.
- Visitors may benefit from guides and informational brochures to better understand the exhibits. Guides and brochures help visitors appreciate the meaning and significance of the artifacts.
- Exhibits displayed in museums must be treated with respect, as they represent valuable heritage from the past.

Following these rules helps protect museums and ensures that all visitors have an enjoyable and meaningful experience. Compliance with these rules allows everyone to benefit more fully from museum visits.
